

BEHV 296: Sophomore Seminar

Provides educational and professional options available to students majoring in the behavioral sciences. Topics include holistic self-assessment to help the student determine if he/she wishes to pursue a career in the behavioral sciences, exposure to professionals in the community who represent disciplines of the department, and integration of faith and vocation. Requirements provided for manuscript preparation according to the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association.

Credits: 2

Program: Behavioral Health