

PSYC 439: Psychology of Religion

Encourages students to think psychologically about religious phenomena from the perspective of evangelical Christianity. Topics include assumptions and methods of psychological approaches to the study of religious beliefs, experiences, and behaviors; integration of psychology and theology; and a review of research findings.

Credits: 3

Prerequisites:

Junior or senior standing and 9 hrs. of psychology.

Program: Psychology