

GEOG 211: World Regional Geography

Explores through a regional approach the patterns that people make on the earth because of their political, social, economic, and cultural activities and the interaction and impact of the earth and the natural environment on people's activities. This course also meets Core Curriculum requirements for the non-laboratory B.S. science component.

Credits: 3

Program: Geography