

MGMT 315: Information Systems and Business Intelligence

Examines the development and use of management and computer information systems supporting the vision and operation of organizations. Emphasizes general knowledge of various information systems, with specific focus on information knowledge management, system development and evaluation, emerging trends, organizational communication, and the ethical use of information systems.

Credits: 3

Program: Business Management