

BIOL 131: World Agricultural Systems

Discusses agro-environmental characteristics of world agriculture. Topics include historical and contemporary features of world food production, interactions between agriculture and human societies (past and present), historical discussions on the world's major food crops and farming methods, current agricultural systems on our planet, climate and soils' roles in agricultural systems, and how agriculture and the rest of the environment interact.

Credits: 3

Program: Biology