

BEHA 296: Behavioral Sciences Seminar

Acclimatizes new Evangel students to the University. Encourages the intellectual and practical orientation to the challenges and opportunities of University life and learning. Students learn about the mission of the University and EU20 themes while learning to build relationships within the department. Provides educational and professional options available to students majoring in the behavioral sciences. Topics include holistic self-assessment, careers in the behavioral sciences, and integration of faith and vocation. Requirements provided for manuscript preparation according to the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association.

Credits: 2-3

Program: Undergraduate